

HEDGEYE DAILY DIGEST

July 20, 2026 · Reader TZ: GMT+8 · Last 24 hours

Hedgeye's refreshed ETF Pro Plus positioning is the one item to hit the tape in the GMT+8 window, and its message is unambiguous: lean defensive, domestic, and income-oriented, and stay out of commodities and Continental Europe. The book carries 21 bullish ideas — led by healthcare, real estate, dividends, and utilities — against 13 bearish ideas dominated by metals, energy commodities, crypto proxies, and European equity/FX. The tilt is textbook late-cycle #Quad3 → #Quad4: own gold, yield, and defensives; fade cyclical and beta.

Note: No Early Look, Macro Show, MOMO Tracker, or KM's Top 3 published inside the GMT+8 Today/Yesterday window — the weekend-into-Monday pre-market gap. Monday's Early Look and Macro Show publish ~7:30 AM EDT (~7:30 PM GMT+8), after this digest runs. Friday's flagship notes fall outside the last-24h window and are excluded per the digest's date rules.

ETF PRO PLUS — NEW WEEKLY REPORT

Capital Allocation / ETF Pro Plus · 07/19/26 03:55 PM EDT (07/20 03:55 AM GMT+8)

Hedgeye's weekly refresh of its ETF Pro Plus model — the actionable expression of the firm's Macro views across asset classes — now stands at 21 bullish and 13 bearish positions, with all prices marked through 7/19/2026. The composition is decisively risk-managed and defensive, consistent with a slowing-growth, disinflationary regime.

On the bullish side, the heaviest concentration is in domestic defensives and income: healthcare appears twice via XLV ($161.09) and FXH ($123.44); real estate through XLRE ($45.42) and office REITs DESK ($43.23); plus XLU utilities, VYM dividend yield, NOBL dividend aristocrats, IAK insurance, and XHB homebuilders. Fixed income and cash-like exposure round out the ballast — BUXX, CLOX, CLOZ, and the US Deflation play BNDD ($97.82). Physical gold (AAAU, $39.59) remains a core long. Growth is represented but narrowly — VOOG, ARKG, and BUG. The only bullish international/EM names are Brazil (EWZ), Colombia (COLO), and New Zealand (ENZL).

The bearish book is where the cyclical caution shows: commodities dominate — Uranium (URA), Silver Miners (SIL), Coal (COAL), and Bitcoin (IBIT) plus its income proxy MSTY. Continental Europe is broadly short — Germany (EWG), France (EWQ), Belgium (EWK) — alongside Canadian Dollar (FXC). Asian and Middle-East EM names India (INDA), Indonesia (IDX), Israel (EIS), and Qatar (QAT) complete the list.

Two divergences stand out. First, gold is bullish while silver miners are bearish — a preference for the monetary metal over higher-beta precious-metals mining. Second, LatAm EM (Brazil, Colombia) is bullish while Asian EM (India, Indonesia) is bearish — selectivity within emerging markets rather than a blanket call. Investment implication: own domestic defensives, dividends/yield, healthcare, real estate, and gold; avoid commodities (metals, uranium, coal), crypto-linked exposure, and Continental European equity and FX.
