

HEDGEYE DAILY DIGEST

Tuesday, September 8, 2026 (GMT+8)

Monday, September 7 was Labor Day in the United States, so the Hedgeye research desk was dark: no Early Look, no Macro Show, no MOMO Tracker. The single publication to cross the tape in the last 24 hours (GMT+8) was the ETF Pro Plus weekly report, which is worth reading closely precisely because it is the one thing that moved — it shows how the book is positioned entering the shortened week, and the positioning is unambiguously a #Quad2 book: long hard assets, healthcare, software and international cyclicals; short the entire long-duration fixed income complex, utilities and momentum tech.

TODAY'S PUBLICATIONS — TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8 (GMT+8)

ETF PRO PLUS — NEW WEEKLY REPORT

ETF Pro Plus | 09/07/26 01:00 PM EDT (09/08 01:00 GMT+8)

The weekly ETF Pro Plus report refreshed the full long/short ETF list with prices marked through 9/7/2026. The headline count is 27 BULLISH positions against 13 BEARISH positions, and the composition of each side tells you exactly which Quad the model is trading. This is the first refresh since Hedgeye's Inflation Nowcast ticked higher for both September and October, raising the probability of back-to-back Monthly #Quad2s — and the book has been rebuilt around that.

The short side is the cleanest expression of the call. Every meaningful duration-sensitive instrument is on the bearish list: Long Treasury Bond (TLT) at $82.21 with a TREND range of $81.04–$83.33, US Treasury Long (ZROZ) at $58.88 ($57.03–$60.10), US Corporate Bonds (LQD) at $105.48 ($104.00–$106.00), the Credit Rotation (JOJO) vehicle at $14.95, and Utilities (XLU) at $43.08 ($41.92–$43.81). If bond yields TREND higher in Quad 2, this is the basket that pays.

The second cluster of shorts is momentum tech and cyclical beta, added late last week: Technology Momentum (PTF) at $100.16, Industrials Momentum (PRN) at $200.35, and Quality Momentum (JOET) at $45.73 — all three added 9/4/2026. Global Airlines (JETS) at $28.80 and Future Vehicles (CARZ) at $106.39 round out the cyclical shorts, with AMD Option Income (AMDY) at $42.81 capturing the semis-side of the software-over-semis trade. Clean Energy (PBD) at $17.71 and Qatar (QAT) at $17.23 complete the list.

On the long side, hard assets dominate. Physical Gold (AAAU) at $43.72 ($42.00–$46.51) has been held since 2/28/2025; Gold Miners (GDX) at $99.26 carries the widest TREND band on the sheet at $93.42–$106.98; Metals & Mining (ICOP) sits at $57.31, Physical Uranium (SRUUF) at $19.96, Natural Gas (UNG) at $10.56, Wheat (WEAT) at $26.49 and Bitcoin (IBIT) at $45.23 ($43.00–$47.29). That is a full-spectrum inflation-protection sleeve, consistent with an economy the model now reads as growth-and-inflation-accelerating.

Equity longs are narrow and sector-specific, not broad-market. Healthcare appears twice — XLV at $171.45 ($167.00–$177.00) and FXH at $133.46 — joined by Biotech (XBI) at $163.81 ($159.00–$172.00). Tech Software (IGV) at $104.57 with a wide $99.00–$113.00 band is the long leg of the software-versus-semis pair that has driven so much of the recent factor alpha. Oil Services (OIH) at $427.53 and Digital Payments (IPAY) at $51.41 complete the domestic longs; note there is no broad S&P or small-cap exposure anywhere on the list — the narrowing thesis in practice.

International longs skew to commodity and hard-asset economies: South Africa (EZA) at $71.64, Colombia (COLO) at $50.00, New Zealand (ENZL) at $48.02, Spain (EWP) at $62.75, and International High Dividend (LVHI) at $42.79. Conspicuously absent: China, Japan and South Korea — all three remain bearish TRADE and TREND in the signal work and are the desk's preferred shorts on bounces.

Short-duration cash instruments still carry the ballast: BUXX at $20.20, CLOX at $25.49, CLOZ at $26.08, VTIP at $49.73 and HYG at $79.16. Note the deliberate split — short-maturity and inflation-linked paper is long, long-duration paper is short. That is the trade in a single line. Managed Futures (DBMF) at $31.44 and Canadian Dollar (FXC) at $70.68 are the remaining diversifiers, with US Cannabis (MSOS) at $5.11 the one high-variance satellite.

Investment implication: the ETF book is a pure #Quad2 expression — short duration risk, long real assets, long narrow secular growth (software, healthcare, biotech), long commodity-linked international equity, and zero broad-index beta. The signal to watch this week is the CPI print, which the desk expects to run hawkish; a hot number validates the entire structure, while a genuinely soft print would put the gold and Bitcoin longs on the front foot and squeeze the rate-sensitive shorts.

YESTERDAY'S PUBLICATIONS — MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 7 (GMT+8)

NO PUBLICATIONS — U.S. LABOR DAY HOLIDAY

Monday, September 7 (GMT+8) covers the EDT window from Saturday afternoon through Sunday evening, and the U.S. market holiday on Monday, September 7 meant the Hedgeye desk published nothing in that window.

What: Nothing was published. No Early Look, no Macro Show, no MOMO Tracker, no Signal Strength Stocks and no Capital Allocation Pro dashboard.

Why: U.S. markets were closed for Labor Day, Monday September 7, 2026. Hedgeye does not publish on U.S. market holidays or weekends.

Who: The last substantive research was Keith McCullough's Early Look of September 4 and Daryl Jones' of September 3, both covered in the previous digest.

Key numbers: The standing levels are unchanged from the September 4 Early Look: SPX 7632–7781, UST10Y 4.63–4.84%, VIX 13.75–16.33, Gold 4296–4691.

Takeaway: The setup carries forward intact — back-to-back Monthly #Quad2s for September and October, short duration, long real assets and narrow secular growth. The next real catalyst is the CPI print this week, which the desk expects to be hawkish.
